

THE BEACH HOUSE SCENE, 30 APR 2011

Guests Charlie & Evalyna, with Lisa at the front patio.

The sea has eaten the shoreline to almost the patio.

Side view of the sea front. Those are our 2 "scholars".

The last of five Talisay trees still standing, but barely.

View through the tree. It is low tide. Note man catching fish fry using a skimming raft. Shallow portion extends far out.

Our next door neighbor's house built near what used to be the "property" fence-line near the shore. Good thing it had deep concrete piles, but barely holding.

We didn't swim, but the girls waded and played with the neighbor's kids. At high tide, swimming's good.

A night shot 4 months ago when the tide/wind was surging at what was still the fence on left. Gone now.

Three years ago, a view from the patio, with the fence and trees intact, and the sea way beyond.
